

Articulating Wonder in A Secular World

a talk by

Carl Rubino

winslow professor of Classics at Hamilton College

Wednesday • March 10, 2010 • 7:30 p.m.

Has the triumph of science in our “secular age” robbed the universe of its mystery and the power to inspire wonder and awe?

Professor Rubino will explore some religious, philosophical and scientific texts that address the issue of wonder. He will show how writers such as the Roman poet Vergil, the American novelist Willa Cather, and the French anthropologist Claude Lévi-Strauss have expressed a sense of wonder without resorting to conventional notions of God.
